apprenticeship a key route to skill 5th report of session 2006 07 vol 2 evidence the apprenticeship programme expanded by 140 per cent between the 2006 07 and 2010 11 academic years apprentices aged over 25 account for 68 per cent of this increase most of the increase in the programme has been in just 10 apprenticeship occupations apprentices and inspectors are generally positive about the quality of apprenticeships with 91 per cent of apprentices satisfied with their training but the rapid expansion of the programme brings risks that need to be managed one concern is that in 2010 11 19 per cent 34 600 of apprenticeships lasted less than six months when most are expected to last at least a year advanced apprenticeships yield higher returns than intermediate apprenticeships spending on adult apprenticeships overall could be producing an economic return of 18 for every 1 of public spending most apprenticeships in england though are at a lower level than those offered by other countries the apprenticeship programme is well coordinated and is better managed than a previous government programme train to gain for example by maintaining a central register of approved providers with a single national contract and account manager for each the rates paid to training providers by the skills funding agency are not based on sufficiently robust information on the cost of the training provision and so the agency and national apprenticeship service do not know the extent to which providers may be earning surpluses or incurring losses on some types of apprenticeship furthermore some employers are not paying the expected contribution towards training providers costs this is the committee s scrutiny of the draft apprenticeships bill which was published on 16 july 2008 while putting much of the current arrangements for apprenticeships onto a statutory basis the draft bill provides greater flexibility to allow employers to design and bring forward for approval their own apprenticeship frameworks the extent of this flexibility was not clear as a key document the specification of apprenticeship standards which will determine the core components of frameworks was not published with the draft bill nor did the government set out in detail how the national apprenticeship service would be resourced or organised or how the legislation would apply in wales these as key omissions impeded the scrutiny process with this in mind it was concluded that in general the legislation is justified because it has the potential to strengthen the structure for apprenticeships in england however there was a major concern of volume at the expense of quality the government must ensure that the draft bill is re written to promote monitor and report on the quality of apprenticeships without provisions underpinning quality the legislation risks the devaluation of apprenticeships and employers parents and young people as well as adults will cease to see apprenticeships as a progressive route through to a future career this report identifies effective strategies to tackle skills imbalances in the united kingdom the department for business innovation and skills works with the skills funding agency the agency and the national apprenticeship service the service to deliver the apprenticeship programme adult apprentices represented 325 500 or 71 of the 457 200 apprentices who started their apprenticeship in the 2010 11 academic year during the 2010 11 financial year the department spent 451 million on adult apprenticeships the programme has been a success more than quadrupling the number of adult apprenticeships in the four years to 2010 11 and the proportion of adult apprentices successfully completing their apprenticeship has also risen from around a third in 2004 05 to over three quarters in 2010 11 further work however needs to be done to maximise its impacts the department should improve its understanding of which apprenticeships offer the biggest returns the service should give both employers and individuals better information about the benefits arising from different types of apprenticeship as well as about the quality of the many training providers the service should do more to increase the number of employers offering apprenticeships and to increase the proportion of advanced skill level apprenticeships achieved moving england closer to the levels delivered in other european countries importantly around one in five apprenticeships lasted for six months or less the service accepts concern that apprenticeships lasting for such a short period are of no proper benefit to either individuals or employers the service says it is tackling the problem but it needs to do more to guarantee the length and quality of training especially the off the job training apprentices receive the apprenticeship programme can play a key role in resolving some of this county s most pressing issues it can help us to create a more skilled workforce to increase employment and to generate sustainable economic growth for these reasons the government has quite rightly made apprenticeships a priority and has devoted significant resources to help them thrive but money does not guarantee success this wide ranging evidence based report carefully lays out the areas where the current model could better serve apprentices their employers or in many cases both the committee recommends that the government takes a more active approach in the future and constantly reviews the profit levels of training providers as an indicator of potential risks to efficiency the committee heard evidence of excessive profits at the public s expense of a government paying out too much money far too easily and of a lack of genuine value for money being provided by apprenticeship schemes this is unacceptable
